

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT 1982-1983

Lebanon Valley College

PRESIDENT'S REPORT 1982-1983

Time passes rapidly during periods of excitement and challenge, and time passes rapidly when shared with one you love. I can hardly believe that this review of the past year is the fifteenth such report I have submitted to you. From my point of view this final report has arrived with tremendously great speed. For me the excitement, changes, challenges, and my love for Lebanon Valley College have made the last fifteen years seem but a day.

Garber Science Center

Since, in many ways, 1982-1983 was the year of the Garber Science Center, this report justifiably concentrates on its impact on the campus. Included in the year were many positive achievements and some major disappointments, as in most years, but 1982-1983 will be remembered primarily as the year in which we began to use our Garber Science Center. Full use of the new facility commenced with the start of the second semester in January. Dedication programs and activities occurred in February. New opportunities for our students were immediately obvious to all who toured this new building. For the first time in its history, Lebanon Valley College boasts a single facility which houses all of the natural and physical science disciplines.

It might seem superfluous to repeat much of what has been written in the dedication booklet or in other publications, but our Garber Science Center is so extraordinary it is a joy to give it a final review in a report of the year. Its four stories harmonize with other campus buildings at the same time its own distinctive identity is maintained. Its design follows the sloping terrain of the southwest corner of the main campus and provides access both from the campus side and the street side. It contains internal and external provisions for the handicapped. Of outstanding significance in the architecture of the Science Center is the energy-saving and energy-efficient nature of its general design and its heating, ventilation, and air-conditioning systems. Well insulated and without windows, the building suffers from very little seasonal heat transference, and with proper balancing of the complex system, climatic control should be achieved easily. A heat-reclamation system takes advantage of the proximity of the Science Center to the central heating plant and reclaims a large part of the heat that otherwise would go up the tall stack with escaping flue gas and be wasted. It is estimated that over 75 percent of the total heat and hot water needs of the Center will be met in this fashion. In order to conserve energy within the building, only those areas occupied during the day are climate-control ventilated. The light switch for each room starts or stops this process.

The Center has been designed with a keen eye toward maximum efficient use of all spaces. For example, classroom facilities exist that allow laboratory work, class discussion and lectures to occur within the same room. Careful departmental layout by floor also encourages interdepartmental study. Ease of maintenance and economy of upkeep are other design factors that prevail throughout.

The basic concept embodied in the Garber Science Center is that it is just that—a science center. This means that while it houses four science departments—biology, chemistry, physics and psychology—it houses much more than just a collection of departments.

The animal research facilities and animal colony with their attendant rooms, for example, are situated where they are easily shared by the biology and psychology departments. The same laboratory will be used for both the physiological psychology and animal physiology courses taught in the biology department.

Another example of the interdependent design of the Center is the close proximity of chemistry and physics facilities. Thus, the chemistry instrument and radiochemistry laboratories lend themselves easily to joint usage for electronic instrumentation and radioactivity measurements. The same sort of cooperative usage is made possible by the location of the electronics laboratory of the physics department.

The design of the Center also makes possible close cooperation between the biology and chemistry departments. A major beneficiary is the biochemistry program, itself a hybrid between the two departments. Both equipment and facilities are shared, including a new liquid scintillation counter.

Cooperative arrangements with departments outside the Center are also possible. The interest of the psychology department in auditory phenomena has a natural tie-in with the sophisticated master recording complex in the Blair Music Center. A comparable relationship exists for the physics of music course.

Taken as an interdependent whole, or department by department, the Garber Science Center offers science teaching and research facilities that equal or surpass those provided for undergraduate study in almost any program anywhere. They provide an excellent physical environment for Lebanon Valley College's excellent science program.

The imposing new structure will help us tremendously in continuing our tradition of a college that cares about standards of personal attention, critical thought and dedicated competence. As we move rapidly toward the twenty-first century, the Garber Science Center will serve as a constant reminder of the necessity for both tradition and change in the educational process.

Dale W. and Ellen Moyer Garber, in whose memory the Garber Science Center is named, were long-time members of the Lebanon Valley College family. Dale Garber received his A.B. degree in 1918. Ellen Moyer, who became Mrs. Garber in 1927, was enrolled in the art curriculum of the College from 1915 to 1917.

After brief experiences in the United States Army and in the teaching profession, Dale Garber entered Jefferson Medical College, from which he graduated in 1924. Dr. Garber began a 52-year practice of general medicine in 1925. Fifteen of those years were spent in Philadelphia and the remaining 37 in Lansdowne, Pennsylvania, until his retirement in 1977. During their many years together Dr. and Mrs. Garber were well known, not only for their professional achievements and services, but also for their support of and interest in their alma mater, their church, their community, and their participation in many other life-enriching endeavors. Neither Dr. nor Mrs. Garber lived to see the completion of the building named for them. Mrs. Garber died in 1975, Dr. Garber in 1981. The very existence of the Garber Science Center is eloquent testimony to the fact that the good they did does indeed live after them.

The Fund for Fulfillment—Phase II is the capital campaign designed to pay for the Garber Science Center and to increase our endowment. As of August, 1983, pledges to this campaign approximated $9,400,000. The goal is $10 million; with everyone's help and cooperation we shall reach it by December, 1983.

Academic Programs

As one reviews the many campus activities, problems and costs which are hardly related to education, it is always appropriate to remind ourselves that academics, intellectual development, teaching and learning are the necessary heart of Lebanon Valley College. We lose our soul when we fail to focus on that fact.

The number of students who worked long and hard enough to earn the status as double majors continued to grow, from 74, 83 and 97 in February of the previous three years to 101 in February, 1983. Some of the most unusual combinations were music-biology, accounting-elementary education, business administration-philosophy, economics-German, and philosophy-recording technology. The extra-heavy study load carried by all of these students was another exciting testimony to the special opportunities and the high expectations of our campus.

At the beginning of the year our affiliation with the International Student Exchange Program added another special opportunity to our academic program. This exchange enables a student to remain enrolled at Lebanon Valley while studying and acquiring credits at a college or university in another country. The 1983-1984 year will be the first time we shall experience the benefits of this exchange, which will bring us increased number of students from other countries.

Fine tuning the academic program is a constant process and basic necessity in a college the size of LVC. Holding to the basics and strengths of our tradition while addressing new needs and providing new opportunities challenges every academic of the campus. Programs can lose strength, both by becoming too diverse and by staying too static. The fine tuning for the year included the addition of a major in Allied Health Sciences to replace nursing and other specific subject areas that remain as intern experiences associated with professional schools. It included changing operations research from a major to a concentration within mathematics. It included the addition of a concentration in business information systems within business administration. And it included the continued work of our hard-working Committee on General Education whose report will be presented in 1983-1984.

Three of our faculty were promoted to associate professor at the end of the year. They are Dr.

Roger Carlson in psychology, Dr. Carolyn Hanes in sociology, and Dr. Owen Moe in chemistry. These changes in rank, together with the new persons joining our faculty for 1983-1984, give us a full-time faculty of 19 professors, 25 associate professors, 24 assistant professors, and 5 instructors.

Some long-time major contributors to the academic strength and stature of Lebanon Valley College retired at the close of the year. Dr. Carl Y. Ehrhart was named dean emeritus and professor emeritus of philosophy. Robert W. Smith was named professor emeritus of music. Dr. Elizabeth M. Geffen was named professor emeritus of history. Dr. L. Elbert Wethington was named professor emeritus of religion.

Student Services

Under the direction of the College chaplain, the Chapel-Convocation Series (LVC Presents) gave the campus new life and zest during the year. The programs followed planned themes and presented immense diversity. Visiting lectures by Leslie Fiedler and Heywood Hale Broun, outstanding faculty lectures, a special celebration at Thanksgiving, the premiere performance of an opera, unusual films, and a delightful awards ceremony all contributed to the new success of this series.

Despite the small size of our College, the area of student services becomes increasingly broad and complex. Under the supervision of our dean of students areas of service covered include counseling, health care, career planning and placement, student government, dormitory life, athletic teams, student organizations, and on and on. The year began with the creation of a new position entitled director of student activities. This new administrator provided coordination for our social activities and increased the student use of our College Center.

In intercollegiate athletics the wrestling and track teams showed winning records. Much time was devoted to some changes in assignments, the founding of the Booster Club, increased emphasis on opportunities for women, and gradual improvement of some facilities, all of which point to a stronger future. The intramural program continued to be of interest to students and showed an eight percent growth in participation.

Questions about employment opportunities following graduation remained paramount on the list of student concerns. Activity in the Career Counseling and Placement Office reached a new high. During the past two years the program of this office has developed into a full professional service. Ninety-nine percent of the Class of 1982 participated in a final employment survey. While many had confirmed their post-graduate plans for study or employment long before graduation, many had to devote summer hours to searching. Quite a few accepted positions at salaries that indicated a significantly decreased escalation rate over previous years, but at the same time some received salaries considerably higher than those paid to some of their Lebanon Valley College professors. The survey of the 1983 class is being conducted now.

College Relations

During the year we planned and recruited for the reorganization of our college relations program. Our new organization was designed to bring under one professional administrator the basic programs that extend beyond the campus. Reaching out to serve alumni, to recruit students, to gain financial support and goodwill, to serve our Church, and to gain greater public recognition require increased coordination. There are no spare dollars to waste on duplication of efforts or inconsistent presentations. This new program was initiated in June, 1983, under the leadership of Dr. Howard L. Applegate, vice president for college relations, to whom reports the dean of admissions, the director of development, the director of alumni services, the director of publications, and the director of information services.

Support Services

Even the small campus requires millions of dollars for support services during a year's operation. Our 1982-1983 year was no exception. Maintaining the buildings, feeding the students, paying the bills, processing the payroll, operating the college store, and providing financial aid for students are just a few examples of support that allowed for the operation of a highly successful instructional program. From a variety of sources more than $2,800,000 went to our students in financial aid. Of this amount more than $600,000 came from Lebanon Valley College funds. During the year, 1,699,000 impressions were made by our central duplicating machine. We issued about 6,000 accounts payable checks. We serviced 2,000 National Direct Student Loan accounts. We cleaned, painted, mulched, mowed, scrubbed, shoveled, patched and plastered what seemed to be endless numbers of square feet, and I salute the hardworking staff who provided all of the support services for us. In the last fifteen years the size of our campus grew from approximately 50 acres to 85 acres, and the square feet of building space expanded from about 363,000 square feet to 586,000 square feet.

Conclusion

During the year, we mourned the loss of many alumni, friends and personnel of the College. Seven who shared the daily campus life were: Willis E. Blanton, student; O. Pass Bollinger, associate professor emeritus; Cloyd H. Ebersole, professor emeritus; Mervin C. Long, plumber; Robert W. Lutz, trustee emeritus; Arlene B. Singer, secretary; and Mrs. Albert Watson, honorary trustee.

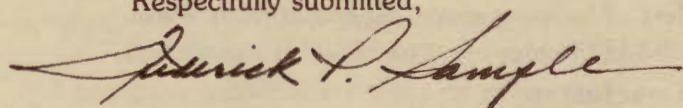

Today's problems in higher education pressed strongly on Lebanon Valley College in 1982-1983. The financial pressures were especially noticeable and will continue to be so for quite some time. Gifts for endowment and operation are increasingly necessary if we are to remain true to our purpose and tradition. Because of loyal and dedicated people Lebanon Valley College continued its unusual record of effectiveness. The members of the Class of 1983 gave evidence of that effectiveness by their many academic successes that will serve them and our society extremely well. They demonstrated their qualifications by their entrance into strong graduate and professional school programs, by their scores on actuarial science examinations, by their selection for teaching positions in a number of states, by their appointment to responsible positions with well-known Fortune 500 corporations, and by their being chosen for study and employment overseas.

Loyalty and dedication must continue to generate our increased support for the unusual style of the small, church-related, liberal arts college that contributes so significantly to the lives which experience it and to the society which sustains it. Thanks to everyone for the privilege of serving as president of Lebanon Valley College for these past fifteen years. Words cannot express my gratitude. Fond memories will reinforce it again and again and again.

Respectfully submitted,

REPORT FROM THE DEVELOPMENT OFFICE

Annual giving for the fiscal year 1982-1983 broke all previous records. The total of $413,444 in unrestricted giving exceeded last year's amount by $20,000. An outstanding record was achieved by alumni giving, with a 13 percent increase over last year. Our alumni generously gave to the College $180,098 in unrestricted giving and $9,970 in restricted giving. The number of donors was augmented by 100, bringing the total to 2,907. Increased amounts in unrestricted support were received in five out of seven categories during this past fiscal year.

We look forward to an even stronger annual giving record for 1983-1984 as increasing numbers of our alumni and friends are completing their pledges to the capital campaign.

One may ask why annual giving is so important. These funds help to balance our budget, to provide a buffer against deficits, and to fund special projects. Annual giving provides a tangible way for alumni and friends to express their loyalty to the College. Dollars are important, but so is participation, a factor considered by outside funding sources in evaluating colleges.

You have given us a clear vote of confidence, and you have our promise that we shall continue to pursue diligently all possible sources for securing money to help provide the necessary funds for Lebanon Valley College.

There is good news also in the report for the current fiscal year from the Fund for Fulfillment—Phase II. Since July 1, 1982, we have added over $1.65 million to the capital campaign. This increase brings the total to almost $9.4 million. Such a large increase in one year was achieved primarily because of the trustee provision to include bequests from living donors in the campaign total and the gala "Let's Get the Campaign Over With Dinner" held last December in Hershey. This dinner gave the impetus necessary to move the campaign forward. At the Hershey dinner, Dr. Sample revealed that the College recently had received information about a major challenge grant of $250,000 to be awarded by the Josiah L. and Bessie H. Kline Foundation of Harrisburg. To win this grant we must raise $1 million in new money, commencing in December 1982. To date we have raised over $700,000, thereby bringing us very close to qualifying for this $250,000 grant.

Further interesting statistics about the campaign include the fact that about sixty percent of donors have completed their pledges. A direct mail piece was sent to all alumni and friends urging them to make a first gift, or a second one.

With success in reaching our goal of $10 million so close at hand, we are trying very hard to give Dr. Sample a fitting farewell gift of a completed capital campaign and a promised Kline Foundation Challenge Grant.

VICKROY SOCIETY

Lebanon Valley College wishes to honor those alumni and friends who contribute substantial support. We are pleased to list the following names, pacesetters in our Leadership Gift Clubs. To qualify for membership in our most prestigious club, the Vickroy Society, a donor must have made payments of $1,200 or more during the 1982-1983 fiscal year. Membership in the Vickroy Society is also attained by combining gifts to the Annual Giving Fund and the Fund for Fulfillment—Phase II.

BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

The number of companies contributing to Lebanon Valley College continues to increase each year. Companies providing direct support are listed below. A major portion of the support the College receives from businesses and corporate foundations indirectly comes through the Foundation for Independent Colleges, Inc. of Pennsylvania. The Foundation for Independent Colleges, on behalf of all the independent colleges in Pennsylvania, conducts a unified annual appeal among business and industry in the Commonwealth. The list below does not include corporations that supported Lebanon Valley College through the Foundation for Independent Colleges. A complete listing of contributing corporations is recorded in the 1983 Annual Report and Corporate Honor Roll of the Foundation for Independent Colleges, Inc. of Pennsylvania.

GIFTS IN KIND

For many years Lebanon Valley College has benefited from the commitment of its friends who give the College a variety of gifts in kind that not only support the academic program but also help provide administrative support to all aspects of college life. Listed below are friends of the College who made such gifts to enrich the College's resources in the fiscal year 1982-1983.

Digital Equipment Corporation
Mr. William C. Gingrich
James M. Grumbine, Photographer
Mr. Dale C. Schimpf
The Wall Street Journal
Hershey Entertainment & Resort Company

ATHLETIC BOOSTERS

The Lebanon Valley College Athletic Booster Club is an organization with a two-fold purpose: to help support the athletic programs at LVC and to promote the continued camaraderie of former athletes and friends of athletics.

Financial support consists solely of voluntary contributions.

TIME AND TALENT

Achievement of the mission of Lebanon Valley College would not be possible without the untiring support of loyal alumni and friends who volunteer time in addition to dollars.

Alumni Ambassadors are graduates who talk with high school seniors who have expressed interest in Lebanon Valley College. Alumni Advocates are secondary school teachers who represent the College in the classroom.

The Alumni Association is governed by an executive committee of graduates chosen to represent a total of more than 8,500 living alumni. Lebanon Valley College is grateful for the constant support of the individuals listed below.
